

1. Why do we have an Australian Human Rights Commission? I lodged a complaint about discrimination against the NSW Department of Education. The AHRC said I had a good case yet they were unable to do help as:

* "We are only another government dept"

* "The legislation isn't strong enough"

This is supposed to be a free legal service - and this situation is the same with other free legal services sponsored by the govt - the govt is behaving like the Mafia.

2. Why is the NSW Department of Education allowed to take contracts for employment off a small sole-trader and give it to another govt department thereby rendering the sole-trader unemployed and having to claim unemployment benefits and unable to meet the costs of raising a child with a disability? Surely it would be good govt to support carers being employed?

3. What is the government doing about the fact that students with disabilities in public schools who are physically and/or sexually abused are not protected by NSW Police if the child is non-verbal and/or has a physical disability because they "Make bad witnesses"? Would this be allowed to happen to any other child / person in Australia?

4. If both parent carers are unemployed, why can't both get the Carers Pension, when they are both doing 24 hours a day, 7 days a week caring? In addition, like government employees, why can't we then get paid overtime?

5. Why is the State of NSW funding itself to provide disability services but the money only goes as far as paying lazy bureaucrats and there isn't any left for the vulnerable?
