

To whom it may concern,

Our position is that we oppose any changes to extend the antidiscrimination Act. It is one thing to consolidate , but another to add. We already have too many laws in this country about what can and can't be done/said – nanny state I think is the term. Consider the recent burning of the Australian Flag. If I had done that and camped on parliament house for the last 40 years without paying rates, I would be in jail now. We already have the Equal Opportunity Commissions.

regards

Kathryn Cooper

[Personal contact details removed]