Dear Attorney General,

I am writing to comment on the Religious Freedom Draft Bill. The matters of concern to me include:

1. No protection for parents wanting the right to withdraw their children from classes that they may object to where it conflicts with a belief system. Just as religious education systems is an opt in/opt out class for different beliefs. People should have the same ability to withdraw from other state programs that are in conflict with other personal belief systems.
2. No protection for Religious schools wanting the right to employ teachers with the same faith.
3. Uncertain protection for large company (turnover >$50 million) employees who express personal beliefs in social media/other public spaces outside of work can be penalised/-fired. It is not the place of the employer to dictate personal belief systems for their employees in their own personal lives outside of the workplace.
4. No protection for smaller company employees who express their personal beliefs in social media or other public spaces outside work may be penalised. It is unfair to be penalised for expressing a point of view that is in particular unrelated to the core of the business.
5. If the state we live in has a different law, this federal law might not override it, but it should – robustness is required in this respect. A federal law covering all states is required to ensure consistency across state borders.
