

Dear Mr Brandis, I would trust that our present government would allow any change to our privacy laws to be cautionary rather than embraced. I do not believe it is ethical for you to sanction this change, to offer personal metadata so easily into civil law proceedings. I do not believe you serve the majority of people in this country by supporting and extending provision of our private metadata into civil legal areas. Please act for the majority of the people and not for the convenience of the high ranking few.

Yours Faithfully, Antoinette George
