

I would be against the use of our data in civil proceedings, not because I have anything to hide, but this is all a very slippery slope with creepy undertones of privacy erosions. Plus I don't trust the Attorney General or his department further than I could throw him and trust the majority of Australia feels the same way. Everyone has a right to a certain level of digital privacy and this is the next step of slowly chipping away at it. The timing of this submission (just before Christmas) is obviously a very sneaky way of hoping people won't notice. Well, I did notice and won't stand by and watch it happen.

Kind regards,
Dave Crook