

TO THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

CYBERCRIME

Prohibition of access to telecommunications data is a very retrograde step. This will have the consequence of enabling cyber stalkers and cyber criminals to harass and molest in the knowledge they are essentially immune from civil prosecution.

At present I am pursuing a cybercriminal who is cyberstalking my family. The Police investigation into their telephony records was half hearted and useless.

I am now using the Forensics division of Korda Mentha to obtain the analysis.

If we have sufficient evidence we will launch civil proceedings for defamation as this person has done enormous reputational damage.

It is hard enough gathering data against clever cyber criminals, making access to the data prohibited will make it near impossible, they will claim the data was only stored to comply with the regulation thus not accessible.

PLEASE RECONSIDER THE DECISION, FOR THE BENEFIT OF VICTIMS OF CRIME.
THE PERPETRATORS SEEM TO GET ALL THE LEGAL PROTECTION THESE DAYS.

R E Dempster
FRANZCR