

To whom it may concern,

After reading through the proposed changes to add further regulatory unspecified in power and scope exclusionary powers to the bill for civil suites goes against what the bill and original idea was sold as.

As this appears to open this up to further uses, which were originally prohibited it seems that this could be used by companies to request and potentially get access to data that was supposed to be for law enforcement alone.

I believe that these changes should be not made. As a technology industry professional this feels as if this data then could be given to third parties with further chance that this data be leaked to the greater public and used for nefarious purposes.

As there appears to be no mention of means and requirements on the parties that are to receive this data for proceedings and even the scope of the data that they are to receive. This leave too much possibility of misuse.

So as stated above, I don't believe that these changes should be made under the non-specific nature of many facets that could lead to further misuse once the data has left the governments hands.

Regards,

Tyrone Abdy

Software Engineer